Model Answer

Meaning of the Quote

Mahatma Gandhi’s statement highlights the influence of thoughts on character and behaviour. Repeated thoughts shape attitudes, attitudes influence decisions, and decisions gradually determine an individual’s conduct and identity.

Importance in Personal Life

1. Character Formation: Thoughts rooted in honesty, compassion and respect encourage ethical behaviour.

2. Positive Attitude: Constructive thinking helps individuals face difficulties with resilience and determination.

3. Self-discipline: Conscious control over harmful thoughts and impulses supports responsible action.

4. Personal Responsibility: Individuals must examine their assumptions and recognise how their thinking affects others.

5. Social Change: Ideas of equality, non-violence and justice can inspire collective action and reform.

Relevance to Public Service

An administrator who believes that every citizen deserves dignity is more likely to deliver services impartially. Conversely, prejudiced thinking can produce discriminatory decisions even when formal rules require equality.

However, positive thinking alone cannot overcome structural inequalities or institutional barriers; it must be accompanied by action, knowledge and supportive systems.

Conclusion

Thoughts provide the foundation for character, but their value is realised through conduct. Cultivating ethical thinking and translating it into responsible action can transform individuals, institutions and society.
