Intelligence-led policing, counter-terrorism, NIA, UAPA, NSG, inter-agency coordination, cyber surveillance, threat assessment, public-event security, forensic investigation, community vigilance.

Model Answer

Introduction

Public gatherings, concerts and major cultural events can become vulnerable to security threats. Preventing such incidents requires intelligence sharing, risk assessment and coordinated law-enforcement responses.

Key Measures for Strengthening Preparedness

- Intelligence coordination: Police, central intelligence agencies and specialised security organisations must share actionable intelligence promptly.
- Technology integration: CCTV networks, cyber-forensics, digital threat monitoring and emergency communication systems can improve threat detection.
- Event security: Risk-based access control, perimeter protection, surveillance and emergency evacuation plans should be implemented.

- Institutional capacity: NIA, NSG and state police must operate within their respective legal mandates and specialised responsibilities.
- Public cooperation: Anonymous reporting mechanisms and awareness campaigns can help identify suspicious activities.

Challenges

Jurisdictional fragmentation, false threat alerts, technological limitations and delays in information sharing can weaken preventive action.

Way Forward

Standard operating procedures, regular mock drills, forensic capacity-building and accountable intelligence-sharing mechanisms should be strengthened.

Conclusion

An intelligence-driven, technology-enabled and coordinated security framework is essential to protect public spaces while ensuring citizens' freedom to participate in cultural and social activities.
